Wollombi Road and Surrounding properties

Marulan Gas Fired Power Station

December 2025 to March 2026

Issued: 26 November 2025

EnergyAustralia is progressing early investigations to support planning and approvals for the proposed Marulan Gas-Fired Power Station and its associated gas pipeline.

As part of this work, specialist studies and surveying will be undertaken along sections of Wollombi Road over the coming months.

There is no access to privately owned land, this work will only be undertaken in the road corridor.

These surveys help us understand local landform, vegetation, fauna habitat and environmental sensitivities before we finalise the pipeline alignment.

We appreciate your cooperation as we progress important early studies for the proposed Marulan Gas Fired Power Station.

What is happening?

You may see accredited ecologists, heritage consultants and surveyors undertaking on-ground investigations. These activities may include:

- Walking the alignment and adjacent road reserve
- Using surveying equipment along the road reserve
- Identifying flora species and vegetation communities
- Checking for threatened species habitat
- Taking photographs and GPS locations
- Minor hand-disturbance (e.g., lifting logs or leaf litter)
- Using binoculars or handheld devices for habitat and heritage assessment
- No machinery will be used. No ground disturbance requiring equipment will occur.

What you need to do

No action is required from you. However:

- Please take care when driving past survey teams
- Slow down around parked vehicles and people working near the road
- Keep pets or livestock away from survey teams if they are near boundary fences

Your awareness helps our teams complete this work safely.
